JACKSONVILLE, Fla.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Feb. 24, 2025-- FIS® (NYSE: FIS), a global leader in financial technology, has announced today that CEO and President Stephanie Ferris was recognized on the CNBC Changemakers list of Women Transforming Business. Each year, this prestigious list honors female leaders who are redefining industries, breaking barriers, and driving lasting change across a variety of business sectors.

"I am honored to be recognized by CNBC as one of the women driving significant transformation across their business or industry," said Ferris. "This recognition is a testament not only to my personal journey but also to the incredible team at FIS that has supported our mission to bring harmony to the world's money lifecycle. This client-centric mission is driving meaningful change to those who use and rely on financial services, and I am proud to be part of an industry that continually evolves to meet society's needs. I extend my congratulations to all the other honorees."

As the first female CEO in FIS history, Ferris has championed the company's bold transformation strategy. She has redefined how FIS technology enables the seamless movement of money when it's at rest, in motion and at work. Under her visionary leadership, FIS has delivered some of the most modern technology in the financial services industry, introduced AI-driven insights and embedded finance offerings into its solution stack, and rolled out next-generation payment capabilities that help businesses, banks, and developers unlock efficiencies and revenue opportunities.

CNBC's annual Changemakers list highlights trailblazing women in the business world who are taking novel approaches to old business problems and identifying new business opportunities while creating a new wave of executives who are transcending gender barriers and serving as role models.

Those recognized in the CNBC Changemakers list will be honored at the CNBC Changemakers Summit on Tuesday, April 8, 2025 in Los Angeles, California.
